Message from the ILTA President

On behalf of the International Language Testing Association (ILTA) Executive Board, I am pleased to welcome you all to the 43rd Language Testing Research Colloquium (LTRC), our second virtual conference. The organizing committee, ably led by Yasuyo Sawaki, Yoshinori Watanabe, Rie Koizumi, and Aaron Olaf Batty, has been working hard to create an online experience for us that maximizes opportunities to participate for attendees in every time zone. The combination of live and prerecorded sessions available on demand, along with the interactive features of the Whova platform, will provide more flexibility to attendees and new ways of interacting with other participants. I would like to thank all the faculty and student committee members, whose names are listed in this program, along with the 2022 LTRC advisory committee, chaired this year by India Plough. Terry Dougherty and Michele Doyle from our management company, Nardone, have also been extremely generous with their time and expertise.

The theme of this year's conference is Linking Assessment to Language Learning and Teaching. Many of the presentations address this theme directly, addressing questions and providing insights about how assessments and assessment results can empower both teachers and students and improve student learning. Other presentations showcase the latest research and scholarship in language test development, validation, and use across a variety of contexts.

As was the case in 2021, most of our sessions are pre-recorded, but this year the presentations will be available from the start of the conference so that attendees around the globe can watch them at a convenient time. The presenters will be available during their appointed sessions to interact with participants via chat, and many have agreed to attend one or more of six scheduled networking sessions. Although there are set Virtual Networking Events on the schedule during which attendees can meet to talk with presenters (look for an event listed for their session), the virtual networking space will also be open 24 hours a day, so you can meet up with old friends or make new ones at any time of the day or night. We are very much looking forward to the Messick Award lecture by Dr. Peter Skehan and the Davies Award lecture by Dr. Jessica Wu, and we are grateful to ETS and the British Council, respectively, for their sponsorship of these awards. We also congratulate Dr. Yan Jin on receiving the Cambridge/ILTA Distinguished Achievement Award, sponsored by Cambridge Assessment English along with ILTA, and we look forward to her lecture as well.

If you are a first-time attendee, I encourage you to attend the Newcomers' Session, to be held on Tuesday, March 8th from 5 to 6:15 pm Tokyo time. This event will give you an opportunity to meet other newcomers, learn something about our professional organization and the history of LTRC, and get advice on how to make the most out of the conference.

I also urge everyone to attend the Annual Business Meeting on Friday, March 11th, from 11:45 am to 1:15 pm JST. At this meeting you will have the opportunity to hear about more upcoming ILTA activities, including plans for future LTRC conferences. Finally, at our closing ceremony where we will recognize ILTA award winners, including the winner of the Lado award for best student paper, at 7:40 pm JST that same day. I look forward to seeing everyone at these events.

Along with our annual conference, ILTA provides many resources and opportunities for professional development, which you can read about on our website. Our webinar series is free to ILTA members, as are many of the webinars sponsored by our Special Interest Groups (SIGs). We have an active Graduate Student Assembly (GSA) that provides opportunities for graduate students to build community and network together. If you are not already a member of ILTA, we encourage you to join to take advantage of these benefits (<https://www.iltaonline.com/page/MembershipPlans>).

Three years ago this month, we met together in my home town of Decatur, Georgia, little knowing that a year later we would have to postpone the conference and then go online for two years in a row. I have been impressed with the resilience of our members and grateful for the ingenuity of our conference teams for the past two years. This week, let us celebrate the fact that we can come together virtually once more, while we look forward to meeting in person again in 2023!

Sara Cushing

ILTA President 2022

Welcome from the Organizing Committee

Welcome to the 43rd annual Language Testing Research Colloquium (LTRC)! We would have loved to host you here in Tokyo, where the season is finally turning and the plum blossoms are beginning to bloom, but we think that we have lined up a great online conference for you to enjoy.

We have worked hard to construct a program that takes participants' time zones into consideration and offers flexibility in watching talks when it's convenient, while still including as many opportunities and venues for live events and conversation as possible. We have leveraged the benefits of our online conference platform, Whova, to provide access to talks throughout the conference, with presenters being available for Q&A at their scheduled time; the benefits of Zoom for meetings, symposia, and keynotes; and the benefits of Wonder.me for more unstructured interactions with presenters and other participants. We hope you'll take advantage of the features of all three throughout the next few days.

The theme of this year's LTRC is "Linking assessment to language learning and teaching." We chose this theme to acknowledge the renewed and growing research interest in the role of assessment in learning and teaching. Interest in the intersections between language teaching/learning and assessment is especially strong in East Asia, where teachers must balance their students' need to gain real-world language ability with that of navigating their testing-centered educational advancement. Simultaneously from the assessors' perspective, a growing understanding of washback is spurring test developers, both in the public and private sectors, to rethink their assessment strategies to encourage better educational outcomes. It's the right time and the right place for this topic to be discussed, and we think you will find the many talks addressing it this year thought-provoking and instructive.

We are especially excited to welcome Jessica Wu as this year's Alan Davies Lecture Award speaker, Yan Jin as this year's Distinguished Achievement Lecture Award speaker, and Peter Skehan as this year's Messick Lecture Award speaker. All three talks will be presented via Zoom, with the speakers available for live Q&A.

We would like to thank the ILTA Executive Board, with special recognition of Erik Voss, who generously shared his LTRC 2021 experience with the online platforms by which we are delivering this conference as well as the LTRC Advisory Committee headed by India Plough along with Hanan Khalifa and Lorena Llosa. We would especially like to express our enduring gratitude to the unflappable Terry Dougherty, Michele Doyle, and Andi Edwards of Nardone, ILTA's management company, for whom online conferences are now "old hat." We also extend our thanks to our many reviewers, organizers of the workshops and roundtable, and to our conference volunteers. We must also recognize our amazing and generous sponsors for their support of LTRC and ILTA, without whom such an event as this would not be possible.

Finally, we would like to thank you, the participants, for coming together to share this experience with us. Let's have a scintillating and enjoyable LTRC 2022!
